Class Location: 210 Stubbs

Instructor: David Sobek

Office Hours: Thursday 9:00-10:00

Wednesday 9:00-10:00

E-mail: dsobek@lsu.edu

Office Location: 211 Stubbs

Office Number: 578-2134

Summary:

This class is the introduction to the study of international politics at the graduate level. It is important to keep in mind that this course does not present a comprehensive coverage of international politics (no course could do that), but it will introduce you to a number of the most important debates within the field and force you to develop a deeper understanding of the subject matter.

This course divides into three main topics: the original debates, the original debates today, and the new debates. Aside from giving you a broad coverage of the literature and ideas, this setup is meant to highlight the fact that scholarly debates are dialogues across time. People do not write articles and books in isolation from one another; rather, they are responses to the previous literature. This will become clearer when you are able to trace ideas across time and through the literature.

Because this course is a seminar, its main job is to expose you to the literature and prepare you for more advance courses. As such you will be required to read and assimilate a large amount of the literature in a short period of time. In addition to the readings, you will have a number of writing assignments meant to reinforce the readings and further your knowledge of the literature.

Ultimately, at the end of the course you should have a broad knowledge of international relations. In addition, you will have developed the skills needed to succeed in more advance courses. Thus, it is important for you to use this class not only as an introduction to international relations, but also, an introduction to graduate work.

Brief Overview of Requirements:

Attendance and Participation: 20% of final grade.

Two Reviews and presentations: each is 10% of final grade.

Final Paper Assignment: 25% of final grade.

Final Exam: 35% of final grade.

Reading assignments

Many of the readings for this course come from the books. Significant portions of the readings, however, come from articles that you will need to acquire. For each week the assignments are listed in a specific order meant to demonstrate the development of the literature. Please read them in the order that they are listed.

Grading System:

Attendance and Participation (20%): Attendance and participation account for 20% of your final grade. It is vitally important for you to come to class prepared, i.e. having carefully read the assignments. Simply showing up for class is not sufficient. You will need to consistently contribute to class discussion in order to satisfy the participation aspect of this part of your grade.

2 Reviews and Presentations (10% each): Three times in the semester you will be required to read and discuss the optional readings. During these weeks you need to prepare a summary for each of the required and optional readings (roughly a half page singled-spaced for each article/about 1-2 pages for a book). You will also be expected to present the optional readings to the class (about 15-20 minutes). The written reviews need to be sent to the class and me by 5:00 PM the Wednesday before the class.

Paper Assignment (25%): During the semester you will be required to write one 10-12 page paper on one of the course topics. This paper is an in depth analysis of one question in the literature. You will be expected to comprehensively summarize the literature on that topic and highlight the important findings as well as the main questions left unanswered. This paper is due on the last day of class but can certainly be turned in sooner.

Final Exam (35%): At the end of the semester you will be given a final exam. The format of the exam will attempt to mimic the comprehensive exams that you will eventually have to take in graduate school. This is to be completed within a week of the final class.
